

English as a Second Language (ESL)

English as a Second Language (ESL) courses are designed to help students who are not native English speakers improve their language skills. These courses typically focus on grammar, vocabulary, and reading comprehension. Students who complete these courses may be eligible for academic credit.

ESL courses are available in various formats, including classroom instruction and online learning. Some courses are offered as part of a degree program, while others are standalone courses. The number of credits earned for these courses varies by institution. For example, at St. Thomas University, students can earn up to 13 credits for ESL courses.

ESL courses are often required for students who are new to the United States or who have not completed high school in an English-speaking country. These courses provide a solid foundation in English language skills, which is essential for success in college-level coursework. Additionally, ESL courses can help students develop the confidence and communication skills needed to thrive in an academic environment.

ESL Courses for Academic Credit

ESL courses for academic credit are designed to provide students with the language skills needed to succeed in college-level coursework. These courses are typically offered as part of a degree program and can earn students up to 13 credits. The courses are designed to be challenging and to provide students with a strong foundation in English language skills. For example, at St. Thomas University, students can earn up to 13 credits for ESL courses.

Integrated Courses

Integrated ESL courses are designed to provide students with the language skills needed to succeed in college-level coursework. These courses are typically offered as part of a degree program and can earn students up to 13 credits. The courses are designed to be challenging and to provide students with a strong foundation in English language skills. For example, at St. Thomas University, students can earn up to 13 credits for ESL courses.

Assisted Courses

Assisted ESL courses are designed to provide students with the language skills needed to succeed in college-level coursework. These courses are typically offered as part of a degree program and can earn students up to 13 credits. The courses are designed to be challenging and to provide students with a strong foundation in English language skills. For example, at St. Thomas University, students can earn up to 13 credits for ESL courses.

Regular Courses

Regular ESL courses are designed to provide students with the language skills needed to succeed in college-level coursework. These courses are typically offered as part of a degree program and can earn students up to 13 credits. The courses are designed to be challenging and to provide students with a strong foundation in English language skills. For example, at St. Thomas University, students can earn up to 13 credits for ESL courses.

ESL Courses

ESL-1013. English for Academic Purposes: Reading and Writing I

This course is designed for students who are new to the United States and who need to develop basic reading and writing skills. The course focuses on understanding and using academic texts, including lectures, articles, and textbooks. Students will learn to identify main ideas, supporting details, and the organization of academic writing. The course also emphasizes the development of clear and concise writing skills, including the use of appropriate grammar and punctuation. This course is a prerequisite for ESL-1023.

ESL-1023. English for Academic Purposes: Reading and Writing II

This course is designed for students who have completed ESL-1013 and need to develop more advanced reading and writing skills. The course focuses on understanding and using complex academic texts, including research papers, essays, and technical documents. Students will learn to analyze and evaluate academic writing, and to develop their own research papers and essays. The course also emphasizes the development of advanced writing skills, including the use of appropriate grammar and punctuation. This course is a prerequisite for ESL-1033.

ESL-1033. English for Academic Purposes: Speaking and Listening I

This course is designed for students who need to develop basic speaking and listening skills. The course focuses on understanding and using academic presentations, lectures, and discussions. Students will learn to identify main ideas, supporting details, and the organization of academic presentations. The course also emphasizes the development of basic speaking skills, including the use of appropriate grammar and pronunciation. This course is a prerequisite for ESL-1043.

ESL-1043. English for Academic Purposes: Speaking and Listening II

This course is designed for students who have completed ESL-1033 and need to develop more advanced speaking and listening skills. The course focuses on understanding and using complex academic presentations, lectures, and discussions. Students will learn to analyze and evaluate academic presentations, and to develop their own research presentations and essays. The course also emphasizes the development of advanced speaking skills, including the use of appropriate grammar and pronunciation. This course is a prerequisite for ESL-2213.

ESL-2213. Advanced English for Academic Purposes I

This course is designed for students who have completed ESL-1043 and need to develop advanced English skills. The course focuses on understanding and using complex academic texts, including research papers, essays, and technical documents. Students will learn to analyze and evaluate academic writing, and to develop their own research papers and essays. The course also emphasizes the development of advanced writing skills, including the use of appropriate grammar and punctuation. This course is a prerequisite for ESL-2223.

ESL-2223. Advanced English for Academic Purposes II

This course is designed for students who have completed ESL-1013 and ESL-1053. The course focuses on advanced reading and writing skills, including critical analysis of academic texts and the development of research papers. Students will engage in intensive reading and writing exercises, as well as participate in class discussions and presentations. The course is graded on a 0-100 scale.

Integrated Courses

ENGL-1013. Introduction to Literature for International Students (ESL)

This course introduces students to the study of literature in English. It covers a range of literary genres, including novels, short stories, and plays. The course focuses on developing students' reading and writing skills, as well as their ability to analyze and interpret literary texts. The course is graded on a 0-100 scale.

ESL-1053. Topics in Canadian Studies for ESL Students: Maritime Society

This course explores the history and culture of the Maritime provinces of Canada. It covers topics such as the development of the region, the role of the sea, and the impact of immigration. The course focuses on developing students' reading and writing skills, as well as their ability to analyze and interpret historical and cultural texts. The course is graded on a 0-100 scale.

ESL-1063. Topics in Canadian Studies for ESL Students: Maritime Arts and Culture

This course explores the history and culture of the Maritime provinces of Canada, with a focus on the arts and culture. It covers topics such as the development of the region, the role of the sea, and the impact of immigration. The course focuses on developing students' reading and writing skills, as well as their ability to analyze and interpret historical and cultural texts. The course is graded on a 0-100 scale.