

D a s s

G a I C

100

M S

100

Ma S

100

100

201

20

02

01

H S

100

100

201

202

20

02

0

00

02

0

100

SOCI-2123. Introduction to Sociology of Globalization

© 2013 St. Thomas University. All rights reserved. This document is the property of St. Thomas University and is not to be distributed, copied, or reproduced in any form without the written permission of the publisher.

2023-2024 Catalog Course Descriptions

SOCI-2443. Racialization and Ethnicity (PEAC)

This course examines the social construction of race and ethnicity, the processes of racialization and ethnicization, and the role of these processes in the formation of social identity and social structure. The course also explores the impact of race and ethnicity on social inequality and social mobility.

SOCI-2513. Sociology of Communication

This course examines the social construction of communication, the role of communication in the formation of social identity and social structure, and the impact of communication on social inequality and social mobility. The course also explores the role of communication in the formation of social movements and social change.

SOCI-2523. Sociology of Aging (WSGS) (GERO 2113)

This course examines the social construction of aging, the role of aging in the formation of social identity and social structure, and the impact of aging on social inequality and social mobility. The course also explores the role of aging in the formation of social movements and social change.

SOCI-2543. Sociology of Religion

This course examines the social construction of religion, the role of religion in the formation of social identity and social structure, and the impact of religion on social inequality and social mobility. The course also explores the role of religion in the formation of social movements and social change.

SOCI-2563. Sociology of Sport

This course examines the social construction of sport, the role of sport in the formation of social identity and social structure, and the impact of sport on social inequality and social mobility. The course also explores the role of sport in the formation of social movements and social change.

SOCI-2613. Sociology of Gender (WSGS)

This course examines the social construction of gender, the role of gender in the formation of social identity and social structure, and the impact of gender on social inequality and social mobility. The course also explores the role of gender in the formation of social movements and social change.

SOCI-2623. Women in the Third World (ECON 2303) (WSGS)

This course examines the social construction of women in the Third World, the role of women in the formation of social identity and social structure, and the impact of women on social inequality and social mobility. The course also explores the role of women in the formation of social movements and social change.

SOCI-2633. Sociology of the Family (WSGS)

SOCI-2643. Selected Topics on the Political Economy of Women (ECON 2223) (WSGS)

SOCI-2653. Sociology of Health

-100

SOCI-2733. Special Topics

SOCI-3023. Contemporary Sociological Theory

20

SOCI-3033. Seminar in Research Strategies

SOCI-3243. Sociology of Men and Masculinities (GEND)

... (.) ...

SOCI-3263. Capitalism and Modern Culture

... 1 ... 20 ...
... 1 ... 2011 ... 2012 ...

SOCI-3313. Sociology of Law (CRIM)

... 2 1 ...

SOCI-3323. Sociology of Women and Law (WSGS)

...

SOCI-3413. Employment Equity Policy and Gender Inequality at Work (WSGS)

...

SOCI-3513. Sociology of Education

... (1) ...
... (2) ...

SOCI-3523. Sociology of Knowledge

...

SOCI-3553. Sociology of the Body

This course explores the social construction of the body and the ways in which the body is used to create and maintain social identity. It examines the role of the body in social interaction and the ways in which the body is used to express social status and power. The course also explores the ways in which the body is used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which the body is used to create and maintain social norms.

SOCI-3563. Sociology of Music (FNAR)

This course explores the social construction of music and the ways in which music is used to create and maintain social identity. It examines the role of music in social interaction and the ways in which music is used to express social status and power. The course also explores the ways in which music is used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which music is used to create and maintain social norms. The course will explore the social construction of music and the ways in which music is used to create and maintain social identity. It will examine the role of music in social interaction and the ways in which music is used to express social status and power. The course will also explore the ways in which music is used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which music is used to create and maintain social norms.

SOCI-3573. Sociology of Art and Culture (FNAR)

This course explores the social construction of art and culture and the ways in which art and culture are used to create and maintain social identity. It examines the role of art and culture in social interaction and the ways in which art and culture are used to express social status and power. The course also explores the ways in which art and culture are used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which art and culture are used to create and maintain social norms. The course will explore the social construction of art and culture and the ways in which art and culture are used to create and maintain social identity. It will examine the role of art and culture in social interaction and the ways in which art and culture are used to express social status and power. The course will also explore the ways in which art and culture are used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which art and culture are used to create and maintain social norms.

SOCI-3583. Research for Social Change (WSGS)

This course explores the social construction of research for social change and the ways in which research for social change is used to create and maintain social identity. It examines the role of research for social change in social interaction and the ways in which research for social change is used to express social status and power. The course also explores the ways in which research for social change is used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which research for social change is used to create and maintain social norms. The course will explore the social construction of research for social change and the ways in which research for social change is used to create and maintain social identity. It will examine the role of research for social change in social interaction and the ways in which research for social change is used to express social status and power. The course will also explore the ways in which research for social change is used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which research for social change is used to create and maintain social norms.

SOCI-3693. Discourse and Society

This course explores the social construction of discourse and society and the ways in which discourse and society are used to create and maintain social identity. It examines the role of discourse and society in social interaction and the ways in which discourse and society are used to express social status and power. The course also explores the ways in which discourse and society are used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which discourse and society are used to create and maintain social norms. The course will explore the social construction of discourse and society and the ways in which discourse and society are used to create and maintain social identity. It will examine the role of discourse and society in social interaction and the ways in which discourse and society are used to express social status and power. The course will also explore the ways in which discourse and society are used to create and maintain social boundaries and the ways in which discourse and society are used to create and maintain social norms.

... ..

SOCI-3723. Special Topics

... ..

SOCI-3733. Special Topics

... ..

SOCI-3913. Sociology of Disease

... ..

... ..

SOCI-4033. Advanced Sociological Theory

... .. 20 , 02 .

SOCI-4043. Independent Study

... ..

SOCI-4053. Independent Study

... ..

*NOTE: N a a a . P a
D a C a a a a a .*